

WORKING SOLUTIONS NAMES JOHN LYMBEROPOULOS, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF SALES

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE – Monday, July 25, 2005

PLANO, Texas – Working Solutions announced today that John Lymberopoulos has joined the corporate leadership team as executive director of sales. John will be leading strategic planning, business development, and national sales efforts for Working Solutions' remote home-based agent call center sales and customer support solutions.

For the past sixteen years, Mr. Lymberopoulos has successfully lead sales strategies and initiatives for MP2 Solutions, Movero Technology, Sprint Mobile Computing, and Baxter International. While at Sprint, he developed and executed a highly successful Executive Business Symposium for wireless technology leaders that became the foundation for subsequent mobile computing education.

Mr. Lymberopoulos, a frequent speaker for Managed Mobile Business Strategies and M-Economy, offers thought provoking and entertaining insights on business transformation and processes. Past topics have been Cool to Cash, Together, The Renaissance of Communication, and Positively Contagious.

“John brings a wealth of experience and knowledge in business development and sales management,” said Tim Houlne, CEO – Working Solutions. “This is a strategic hire for Working Solutions. We are confident that John will help us advance our leadership position in the remote home-based sales and customer support arena.”

John is a graduate of Texas Christian University and he and his family live in McKinney, Texas.

About Working Solutions

Since 1996, Working Solutions, a private-held company, based in Plano, Texas, continues to lead the industry in remote home agent services, providing responsive and pro-active customer sales and service to Fortune 1000 companies, utilizing a dedicated pool of more than 28,000 remote home-based agents across the country.

For more information about Working Solutions, visit our website at <http://www.workingsol.com>